The Influence of the DCFR in Spanish Case Law

am Dienstag, 23. August 2016 um 18:15 Uhr
im Hörsaal 44/E04 des European Legal Studies Institute (ELSI)
Süsterstraße 28, Osnabrück.

The impact and relevance of the DCFR differs among European jurisdictions. Regarding the Spanish case, the Supreme Court started to introduce references to the Draft in its judgements in 2009, and although they are not profuse, they continue nowadays. This trend has been increasingly followed by courts of appeal, and it contributes to spread the incidence of the DCFR in Spanish law, although it is a slow process.

As far as the DCFR is just a proposal of regulation, its articles are not directly applied in Spain, but some of its definitions and solutions are becoming relevant in the interpretation of Spanish law or to resolve legal discussions. Additionally, legal scholars are paying more attention to this text in the proposal of new national rules to modernize our XIX century Civil Code. This lecture explains and discusses the reference to the DCFR in Spanish case law and how it contributes to the evolution of Spanish Private Law.

Dr. Celia Martínez-Escribano is Associate-Professor of Civil Law at the University of Valladolid since 2009. Her research is mostly specialized in Property Law. She has also published some studies in Consumer Law, Family Law, and Tort Law. She has been visiting researcher at the University of Amsterdam (2015), the British Institute of International and Comparative Law (2010), Harvard University (2008 and 2006), University of Salzburg (2005) and University Panthéon-Assas, Paris II (2002).
